Finkelsteining As a Fine Art LEAPS 200 FEET

It Flourishes at Broadway and 13th Street as the Willard Company.

The Tribune's Bureau of Investigations Buys a Damaged Hat for $3.00, Practically Worthless Socks for 29c. and a 75c. Silk Front Shirt for $1.34, Not to Mention a Suit Which Jumped from $15.00 to $20.00 While We Waited.

By SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS.

The time is ripe for some one of our expanding correspondence schools to establish a new degree. What is urgently needed is an A. B. of trade, the honorific initials to stand for "Ananias of Business." For the first candi-one of its alluring claims. The values are "rare," indeed: they are so rare as to be almost undiscoverable!

Where to begin in a store where one can't throw a stone without hitting a fake, is always a difficult question. The Tribune investigators aidn't really begin anywhere. They just went to the place, accepted the word of the store at its face value (whether expressed on a written placard or in the "patter" of the sales force) and bought. Up to date they haven't got their money's worth in a single instance. For the enlightenment of trade, I will set forth in a simple diagrammatic form the shopping experiences of the investigators. First will come the article of merchandise goods represented as being sold at a cut price are really sold at a price with its sale-price, then the line of talk or print whereby it was exploited, and finally its real nature and value. We will start at the top of duly arrayed humanity and pass downward and inward.
